PARISIAN SAGE
FOR THE HAIR

Unightly-matted—colorless—scraggy hair made—fluffy—soft—abundant and radiant with life at once. Use Parisian Sage. It comes in 50c. bottles.

The first application removes dandruff, stops itching scalp, cleanses the hair, takes away the dryness and brittleness, increases
the beauty of the hair, making it wavy and lustrous.
Everyone needs Parisian Sage.

Yes Paint

May be high next year, so much work has been put-off and more will be.
Men don't know that it costs more money to wait than to paint; it costs about 10 per cent to wait, and not over 5
for the extra price.

What is 5? About $2.50 on the average job (3000 square feet); 10 gallons Devco, 15 of average paint; yes 20 of some.

Suppose there's plenty of oil next year, won't paint go down? Yes, a little;
there can't be plenty of oil; the demand settles that. Half the work of last year and this is waiting; so stupid we are.

Notice of Foreclosure of Mortgage.
Whereas Robert McKee, then of Hiram,
now of Fryeburg, in our County of Oxford, did, on the eleventh day of May A. D. 1896, by his mortgage deed of that date duly executed by him, and recorded in Oxford Western District Registry of Deeds in Book 81, Page 355, convey in mortgage to Margaret Matthews,
late of said Hiram, now deceased intestate,
the following parcel of land, with the buildings thereon situated at East Hiram Village in said town, and thus described, viz: situated on the westerly side of the road leading to the farm owned by Mary Nelson stands
the following land and buildings, to-wit: Beginning at the corner of the A. S. Milliken lot, and running along line of said lot, thence west by said line twelve rods to a stake and stones, thence northeast seventeen and one-half rods
to a stake and stones, thence east nine and one-half rods to the first mentioned bound, reserving as then conveyed the lot on which the house then owned by Mary Nelson stands.
And whereas the condition of said mortgage has been broken, I now claim a foreclosure thereof, according to the statute in such case made and provided.

WEST STONEHAM.

A Pleasant Birthday Party.
Sunday, August 10, was the birthday of Merritt Damon of Norway and he was invited to spend it with some old time friends, Mrs. Sarah Bartlett and Jennie Bates, who are sharing the commodious home of Mr. and Mrs. William Hammond, in West Paris.

His daughter and her husband, Chas.
Chick, brought him in their auto, and were accompanied by their sons, Howard and Frances. The morning was glorious and the ride most enjoyable. Little more than a half hour was taken for the ten miles' drive, and was a great contrast to a similar trip taken with a yoke of oxen and a team of horses.

Several hours were spent in talking over old times and friends, some many miles away, others who would come no more, but whose memory lingers like that of a fragrant flower.

Maine Corn Packing.

The corn canning industry of Maine
may easily be called one of its most flourishing business organizations and a very desirable asset to the state's commercial activities. It has been a growing and progressive industry from its very beginning, in the suburbs of Portland, up to the present time and there is a promising future ahead. The business has been promoted and developed by men who have been a credit, not only to this industry itself, but to the state as well.

Climate conditions and favorable soil has been largely instrumental in making Maine the home of canned corn of the finest quality, for Maine packed corn is the recognized market standard both in quality and price. Experience has shown that in no other locality and by no combination of methods or ideas can the results of Maine corn packers be duplicated.

The conditions in this state are right and planters as well as packers understand them and have made the most of the opportunity.

There is no doubt but that the farmers of Maine are the chief beneficiaries of those institutions or organizations allied with the corn canning industry. In the first place there is no crop from which,
in the average of years, the remuneration to the planter is larger or more satisfactory, taking into consideration the time, labor and money expended in its three months' development, than that derived from the planting of sweet corn.

In this present season the farmers in Maine, with the possible exception of places where concessions have been made to induce some packers to establish a new plant, will receive two and one-half cents for every pound of corn delivered at the factory, i. e., two and one-half cents per pound for the corn after it is out from the cob. The methods of purchase differ in different places and among different packers. In some instances the loads of corn are kept intact from the time they are delivered in the factory, and till the entire load has been cut and weighed in the factory itself.

In some factories the contracts specify that the corn shall be brought in the husk, in which cases the ton is the unit of purchase. In other factories the purchase is made on the basis of a "test cut." This last named method is probably the most satisfactory
one and will doubtless in time be adopted throughout the state.

In buying corn by this method the loads are weighed in the husk when brought to the factory and from each load so weighed a test of 25 50 pounds, as contract may specify, is taken from the load. This test so taken is husked and the corn out from the cob and weighed and whatever weight results from weighing the whole delivered in the husk and of computing its value at two and one-half cents per pound.

The various methods of purchase all produce practically the same result, but that one in which the value of the load is computed by the test is in the planter's favor, if there is any recognized preference among the three methods. The test method insures the farmer against any loss of corn that may in the process of canning be wasted, since his corn has been already received and credited to him on the basis of the test cut, and he will receive pay for that corn even if for some reason it never gets in the packer's can.

There will be found many instances this coming fall in which the gross returns to planters of sweet corn will exceed $100 per acre. In many cases the gross returns, upon analysis of the case, actually is the net return, if the fodder
and the waste available at the factory, and the waste of husks and cobs is taken into consideration. The value of such material for the silo should not be and generally is not overlooked by the present day farmer who is making husbandry a business and is conducting his farm on a business-like basis. Ensilage is an important factor in farming and while no doubt many farmers are planting corn for the ensilage alone, nevertheless it is very widely conceded that more satisfactory results are obtained by planting sweet corn, because in the latter case
the farmer gets the benefit of a combination in his crop and the ears that are destroyed in the value or efficiency of the standing stalks for ensilage.

There is one other feature in planting sweet corn which ought to appeal to the farmer and that is the assurance of the stable market for his crop which is created by the contract between packer and planter. The open market is as unstable and speculative in the case of farm products, as in that of any other commodity, possibly more so, and that market is subject to the same variations and fluctuations which supply and demand are bound to create, but experience will show that a reasonable and constant return on some produce for each and every season will yield a higher average profit than will be the case if the same product is sold in an open market subject to the rising and falling prices that may prevail during the same length of time.

The substance of the matter is just this, that the proposition offered by the packer to the planter of sweet corn is in all its aspects a sound, profitable and business-like one, and indicates very plainly the desire for that mutual cooperation which must exist for the success in the future of both parties concerned.

The changes in the canning industry
in the 50 years or more of its existence have been many and varied and progress has been rapid, for it is a long step from the time of the Winslows to the present day. There has been a growth in annual production from a matter of a few hundred cases to over a million and a half cases packed in 1912. Business methods have changed and many new men have necessarily come to the front to carry out policies that are consistent with the new ideas.

STATE OF MAINE.

County of Oxford, ss: To the honorable Justice of the Supreme Judicial Court, next to be held at Paris within and for the County of Oxford on the second Tuesday of October, A. D. 1913.

Respectfully represents Grace I. Rawson of Norway in the County of Oxford and State of Maine, that she was lawfully married to Virgil A. Rawson, then of Paris in said County and State, now of Paris unknown to her, on the twenty-seventh day of July, A. D. 1903, at Paris aforesaid by the Rev. A. W. Feltie an Ordained Minister of the Gospel duly qualified to solemnize marriages, that Virgil A. Rawson and her said husband have resided together as husband and wife at Paris and at other places in this State, and at Haverville in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts till about January first, A. D. 1909.

That their libellant has always conducted herself as faithful chaste and affectionate wife, doing her full duty towards her said husband and the said Virgil A. Rawson, regardless of his marriage contract and duty and without fault upon the part of said libellant, on or after the first day of January, A. D. 1909, until he deserted her libellant, and that said Virgil A. Rawson has been continuous from said date being a period of more than three consecutive years next prior to the filing of this libel. Your libellant further avers that the residence or whereabouts of her said husband is unknown to her as she has not seen or heard from him for a long time and cannot by reasonable diligence ascertain his whereabouts although she has made extraordinary effort to find his present location.

Your libellant further respectfully represents that one child has been born of said marriage, viz. Shirley A. Rawson, now six years of age which child has always resided with libellant. Whereupon the ground of such utter desertion continued for more than three consecutive years next prior to the filing of this libel, your libellant prays that the bonds of matrimony between herself and her said husband be dissolved by decree of divorce, and that the care and custody of her said son, Shirley A. Rawson be decreed to libellant, during his minority or till further order of Court.

Norway, August 15, 1913.

GRACE I. RAWSON.

STATE OF MAINE.

County of Oxford, ss: Upon the foregoing Libel, ORDERED, That the Libellant give notice to the said Virgil A. Rawson, Libellee, to appear before the Justice of the Supreme Judicial Court, to be held at Paris within and for the County of Oxford, on the second Tuesday of October, A. D. 1913, by publishing an attested copy of said libel, and this prior thereto, three weeks successively in the Norway Advertiser, a newspaper printed in Norway, in our County of Oxford, the last publication to be 30 days at least prior to said second Tuesday of October, 1913, that he may there and then in due Court appear and show cause, if any he have, why the prayer of said Libellant should not be granted.

Chief Justice of the Supreme Judicial Court. A true copy of the libel and order of Court thereon.

Attest: CHARLES F. WHITMAN, Clerk.

[SEAL] KIMBALL & SON, Att'ys for Libl.

The Blueberry Cake.

There are more or less grave problems in hydastatics, milkostatics and butterstastics to be solved in the making and baking of every blueberry cake, which by now has become indispensable to nearly every well-regulated household in Maine.

Naturally the raw and ripe fruit, plucked fresh from the vines, is much to be preferred, although some very fine cooks use dried blueberries or even dried huckleberries at the culinary pinch. Dried huckleberries may serve, if one can stand the coarse seeds. Much depends upon the personal preference of the cook or upon the taste of the cook's husband. Often the preference of their greedy children are consulted.

There seems to be an unwritten law, almost as inextorable as the laws of the Medes and Persians, that the blueberry sugar cake is under sad taboo in most demand among the populace is—especially if it is to be broken and eaten while piping hot—for this sort, the molasses or the molasses-and-sugar blueberry is in greatest demand. Too much sugar—even too much brown sugar—seems to be the very soul of gustatory enjoyment out of any blueberry cake, and relegates what promised to be a work of high art, to the locked tin box, where the company cakes and the waiting wedding cakes are sacredly preserved, as if they were "on deposit" in a savings bank.

The one great study in concocting a real enjoyable blueberry cake is to so arrange the density of the compound as the included berries may not sink to the bottom of the cake pan, while the light airy agones of cooking. It is here that the need of a thorough training at some vocational school comes in with great force.

The pressure exerted by the different cake-ingredients upon one another, and upon the sides and bottom of the pan, the difference in specific gravity when hot and when cold; the varying effects of baking powders and the cream-tarar, soda mixtures—all these must be figured out to a nicety before adding the ripe blue fruit to the body which must cement the cake loaf into a mass of sweetened and berried delight.

Woe, double woe to the cook who through berries step and stagger down through the enclosing cake mass and bring up in a layer of half-cooked fruit at the bottom of the pan! It would have been far better for that inexperienced cook, if she had borrowed a dime or a quarter and gone to the nearest bake shop and purchased her blueberry cake ready made and baked. Happy is the cook whose blueberry cake rises just right.

Thrice happy the cook whose blueberries do not slide and slither to the very bottom of the cake pan and lie there in an indistinguishable mass, which may be bittern and may be sweet, but which was originally started for a mouth-watering blueberry cake, made after a recipe which has come down in the family from the days of our great-grandmothers.

It were better for that cook, if she hired out as "second girl" for $2 a week, or if she had never aspired to anything above plain dish-washing, or if she had married a chap who stood behind a ribbon counter and helped him to live out of a baker's cart.

Makeup of Various Fabrics.

One who would learn to know the various dress goods should read this list from the Dry Goods Economist.

Agaris—A cotton fabric of loop yarn construction, having a surface somewhat similar to a fine Turkish toweling.

Armure—A sheer cotton fabric. There are also wool batiste.

Bayadere—Applied to fabrics in which the stripes, whether of color or of texture, crosswise; that is, from selvage to selvage.

Batiste—A sheer cotton fabric. There are also wool batiste.

Bedford cord—A wool or cotton fabric having a corded effect running lengthwise of the piece, the cords being very slightly separated. Cotton bedford cords closely resemble a wide-welt pique.

Beize—A dress fabric of fine texture, woven from yarns in which two threads of different colors are twisted together or wherein printed yarns are employed.

Bengaline—A silk fabric having three threads or cords at intervals from selvage to selvage. Frequently the cord is of wool, covered with silk in the process of weaving.

Botany—A fine grade of Australian wool. Applied also to yarns.

Boucle—Having knots, loops or curls on the surface. Usually employed for cloaking.

Bourette—A rough-surfaced effect produced by introducing lumpy knotted yarns at intervals in the weaving.

Brocade—A fine woolen cloth, having a smooth, glossy surface with a twilled back.

Broche—The French term for "brocade." Elaborate figures woven on the surface of the fabric.

Butcher's linen—A coarse, heavy, plain weave linen.

Camel's hair—A loosely woven fabric of long fiber wool.

Cashmere—A woolen fabric of twilled construction and soft finish, having the twill on the "right side."

Challie—A lightweight, plain weave dress fabric of wool or of cotton, or of cotton and wool; usually printed.

Charmeuse—A lightweight satin, having a high natural lustre.

Chivert—A heavy, rough-surfaced woolen fabric, either twilled or made of knotted yarns.

Chiffon—A sheer silk, tissue of plain weave and soft finish. The word is often used to indicate light weight and soft finish, as "chiffon velvet."

A Fly in the Ointment.—"Are you not coming to the dinner at the burgo-master's house? The eating there is always fine."

"The cooking is excellent, but his daughter's singing aggravates my dyspepsia."—Simplicissimus.

Elastic. Old Lady—How old are you, little boy? Bobbie—I'm under five years on the street cars and over sixteen when I go to the movies.—Puck.

A Little Nearsighted. She—Give me a dozen bananas, please; but I don't like the look of that little one. Shopman—That ain't a banana, miss; that's my thumb.—London Mail.

The Art of Listening.

A good listener is more to be desired than a fine conversationalist. In order to be a good listener you must appear to be interested, answer appropriately, briefly and to the point, and give your companion generally the impression that you are in sympathy with his highly entertained by what he is saying.

Avoid pedantic displays of learning. The expression of immature opinions is always bad taste. Persons, young or old, should not attempt to criticize books of art or science positively, certain that their knowledge is sufficient to justify their criticism.

Be careful in introducing long-winded anecdote into the conversation. Nothing is more awkward than to find an array of bored faces when one is not more than half through with a story.

Repartee should be indulged in only moderately. Otherwise it may degenerate into flippancy, a habit much to be condemned in a certain class of young persons who think themselves unusually clever or, as our American word goes "smart."

The great secret of talking well is to adapt your conversation to your company as skillfully as may be.

People are taking more interest in their own affairs than in anything else which you can name. A wise host or hostess will make a mother to talk of her child, an author of his book, an artist of his picture, etc. Having furnished the topic, you have to listen, and acquire a reputation for being amiable, intelligent and well-bred.

If you would not be unpopular do not always be witty, no matter what your natural abilities may be in that line. People do not always like to be outshone.

Do not officiously supply a word or phrase if the speaker hesitates for a moment; he will think of one he wants or supply another in good time.

Never correct a fault in pronunciation or in facts, in company or in private if you wish to be a friend.

Avoid such colloquialisms as "Says I," "You know," and other senseless repetitions that might be mentioned. Never speak to a person as "a party," nor refer to absent persons as "he or she." Give the name of the day of gentlemanly referred to.

A PERFECTLY GOOD REASON.

Her Visit to Chiroprapist Not Due to Sore Feet.

SHE was a dear, old fashioned, modest, simple minded lady, so that when she announced the fact that she thought of paying a chiroprapist a visit her great friend was duly astonished.

"I didn't know you suffered from corns," remarked the latter when the news was first broken to her.

"I don't," replied the old lady mildly, albeit firmly. "Neither am I afflicted with bunions, chilblains nor any other pains in the feet."

Her friend gazed at her with growing consternation.

"Then, my dear," she remonstrated gently, "what on earth do you want to visit a chiroprapist for?"

The little old lady's cheeks flushed a delicate pink as she leaned forward, laid one mitted hand on her interrogator's arm and whispered:

"It's this way, my dear. I do so want to be able to boast that at least once in my life I had a man at my feet!"—Fun.

The Up to Date Girl.

It was after her birthday, and the little maid of eight was sitting disconsolately by the nursery window.

"Aren't you going to play with your new doll?" asked her mother, with a side glance at the discarded present.

"No," said the little girl.

"I thought you liked her so. Don't you?"

"Oh, but you wanted a nice dolly, one that talked, didn't you?"

No response.

"And this one says 'Ma-ma' 'Pa-pa'."

The little maid's eyes flashed and sparkled as she replied: "I want a doll that says 'Votes for women.'"—Gulf State Presbyterian.

No Wonder.

Mrs. Crocker was enjoying her first trip abroad. Her husband had recently acquired great wealth, and, although she knew that her knowledge of society was vague, she did not wish others to ascertain the fact.

One evening she was invited to a box party at a theater. Seated next to her was one of the leaders in society, Mrs. Stone.

"I find the acoustics of the house very bad," remarked Mrs. Stone. "Don't you?"

"Yes, it does seem so," replied Mrs. Crocker thoughtfully. "I understand it comes from a brewery in the neighborhood."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Dangers of Aviation.

During one of the aviation meets a young woman went through the hangars, and after asking the usual foolish questions that aviators have to answer during a tour of inspection she wanted to know:

"But what if your engine stops in the air—what happens? Can't you come down?"

"That's exactly the trouble," responded the willing guide. "There are now three men up in the air in France with their engines stopped. They can't get down and are starving to death."—Argonaut.

"Hoosier."

A Chicago lady had a Swedish cook, and she heard this conversation between her cook and the maid next door, also a Swede:

"How are you, Hilda?"

"I well. I like my job. We got cre-mated celter, ceterary plumbing, elastic lights and a hoosier."

"What's a 'hoosier,' Hilda?"

"Oh, a bell rings. You put a thing to your ear and say, 'Hello,' and some one says, 'Hello,' and you say 'Hoosier.'"

SOUTH WATERFORD.

Bear Mountain Road.

The reconstruction of the Bear Mountain road which has been going on for nearly two months with a large force of heavy workers, under the supervision of Timothy Heath, of Norway, is, for the present year, nearly completed.

An immense deal of blasting and excavation for a part of the way along the shore of the pond has been done, and it is expected the object of the huge undertaking—the widening of the highway under the mountain to a standard gauge for automobile travel, will be accomplished.

The fact that no accidents have occurred to the more than 100 horses employed on the work is creditable to those in immediate charge of the use of the great quantity of dynamite employed in blasting.

Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Borer of Philadelphia are guests for the third year of Oak Lodge.

A party of boys from one of Mr. Cobb's camps in Denmark were camping at Keoka lake on Monday night.

Fred Pingree and wife of Leominster, Mass., were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Sanborn of Mr. Pingree was a former resident of Waterford.

A new bungalow on the eastern shore of Keoka lake, erected for Mrs. Harnden of New York by Win Kingman and son, is nearly finished for occupancy.

Samuel Stuart and Colman Packard of Harrison are painting and staining the outside walls of the new-old Houghton barn, part of which are shingled.

Wm. Bennett and Jessie Bennett of Haverhill, Mass., brother and sister, are guests of Mrs. Harry Watson are guests of Mrs. Watson at her summer home in the Fogg cottage. Mr. Bennett is a mining engineer lately from the mines of Brazil.

Recent arrivals at Mrs. Florence Noble's are Mr. and Mrs. Josiah Monroe and daughter, Marion Monroe, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Nelson, all of Philadelphia; Mr. and Mrs. Daniel McWain of Newton Center, Mass., and Mr. and Mrs. Andrew G. Carpenter of Plainfield, N. J.

The work of demolition of the interior structure of the old Houghton hotel building and other changes in the external form of the venerable house is now underway. Messrs. Hamlin & Son, the proprietors of the famous old hostelry, one of the best known in the county for nearly a hundred years, are designing to thoroughly change the internal arrangement of the rooms from basement to attic, so that when completed, it will be entirely modernized in style of finish and will contain every desirable improvement known to the constructive genius of the age. The plan for reconstruction here mentioned is only a small part of the scheme of extensive and enlargement of the great "old home" property. The long range of buildings formerly connecting the house with the stable have been razed to the ground and a larger and more commodious building is erected on its site, which is a complete model for a dwelling house in itself. The massive concrete basement walls for underpinning of stable and the new addition to the house is an innovation in structural work quite amazing in rural neighborhoods.

"Camp Wigwam" the new encampment of boys on the north shore of Bear pond, is having a very prosperous season. The camp is under the direction of Prof. Abraham Mandelstam of Clark University, Worcester, Mass., and Arnold M. Lehman of New York City.

The boys in camp number 46, and belong to big families in Massachusetts, New York and other states, mostly Jewish. The camp comprises about 30 acres of land, dry and finely adapted to the purposes of its occupancy. A complete system of hygienic sanitation is established for the camp, by which all danger of sickness or disease of any kind is eliminated. In this respect Camp Wigwam presents an example of wise forethought and precaution denoting the highest intelligence in the founding and directing of the camp, and in the salutary regulations for discipline of the lively, juvenile family makes it a very interesting institution of its kind. A part of the boys are taking regular instruction in such subjects of study as is included in the curriculum of their schools. The camp, however, is not a "summer school" except for the few who wish to study for advancement. A handsome camp paper is published three times during the summer.

Putting Tobacco in Tins is Like "Locking the Stable Door"

—“after the horse is gone.” Because when tobacco is chopped into small pieces, much of the flavor evaporates before the tobacco goes into the tin.

There is only one way to keep all the natural fragrance and original flavor in tobacco until it reaches your pipe—and that is the hard-pressed Sickle plug. And the natural leaf wrapper is a better protector than any tin, tinfoil or waxed paper.

You always get a fragrant, slow-burning, cool smoke from Sickle, because you slice it off the plug as you use it. You get more tobacco, because there's no package to pay for. There's no tobacco wasted—and the last pipeful is as fresh and sweet as the first. Smoke Sickle today—all good dealers sell it.

W. O. FROTHINGHAM SOUTH PARIS, MAINE

Joseph Andrews' Letters.

On Sunday December 15th, I took the midnight train at Houston, Texas, on the S. P. Railroad and early the next morning arrived at San Antonio, 209 miles distant, where I stopped off for a three days visit with old Dakota friends and kindred.

Texas, with an area of more than 237,000 square miles, might well claim to be the Empire State and San Antonio, the largest city in the state and with a population of over 100,000 is the pride and joy of every true blooded citizen of Texas.

San Antonio was founded in 1689 and for nearly 150 years thereafter it was the center of many a dark and bloody battle field as Frenchmen, Spaniards, Mexicans, Texans and Americans struggled for the mastery.

Near the center of the city stands that cradle of Texas liberty, the Alamo where on the 8th of March 1836, Travis, Crockett, Bowie and their 180 heroic companions fought and died for Texas' independence. They fought so well and fiercely that when the last Texas ranger had been slain, it has been estimated that more than 1600 dead and wounded Mexicans were piled in heaps around them.

Not far from San Antonio is Goliard where soon after the slaughter at the Alamo, a force of five or six hundred Texans surrendered to General Santa Anna under promise of protection, but who were taken out by that cowardly butcher, bound and unarmed and shot to death.

Only about six weeks after the battle of the Alamo the crisis came when at the battle of San Jacinto, General Sam Houston and his immortal 733 Texans met Santa Anna and his 1600 well trained veterans, and with the war cry, remember the Alamo, remember Goliard, charged like a whirlwind upon their ranks. The fight was short but decisive. They killed 630, wounded 200 and captured 730 of the Mexicans and won the independence of Texas and avenged their slaughtered comrades.

After the battle of the Alamo, Santa Anna sent a company of Dragoons to the timber for dry wood, the bodies were then gathered, piled in layers with the wood between them. When all had been piled kindlings were applied, then fire and the bodies reduced to ashes.

The Alamo is owned by the Daughters of the Republic of Texas, a patriotic organization of ladies who are lineal descendants of those who fought for the independence of Texas, and will be preserved for all time to come as a sacred monument to the heroic band whose lives were not shed in vain. Beside the Alamo there are four other missions 2, 4, 6 and 9 miles distant from the Alamo.

These missions were founded by the Franciscan Friars who carried a sword in one hand and a bible in the other. Their work was amongst the wild and savage Indians, and they encountered many dangers and hardships. These missions were built strong and serviceable and answered both as a residence, a church and as a defense against hostile bands of Indians. They were connected with each other by a tunnel or underground passage so that the inmates could pass from one mission to the other unseen and in safety.

Today San Antonio with her historic large army post (Fort Sam Houston) fine hotels and public buildings, fine pure houses and beautiful homes, pure water, a fine system of steam and electric cars, splendid parks, fine country roads, and with a climate unsurpassed for healthfulness, is a Mecca for the winter tourist, who can afford to travel and who is seeking for health or pleasure, a deal home in which to spend the winter and escape the rigors of northern climate.

On Thursday morning, Dec. 19th I bade my friends goodbye and started for Los Angeles, Cal., 1431 miles distant where I arrived at 7 p. m., Saturday evening, seven hours late. At El Paso we crossed the Rio Grande river close by the Mexican border. Here and for many miles along the line large numbers of Uncle Sam's soldier boys were quartered in anticipation of trouble from Mexican insurgents. At Yuma, Ariz., we crossed the Colorado river, which is also near the Mexican border. A few miles up to the river at Laguna. Dam is located one of Uncle Sam's most extensive irrigation plants. Yuma is 137 feet above sea level while Salton in the Imperial Valley about one hundred miles distant is 264 feet below sea level.

A few years a private irrigation company brought up a large tract of land in the Imperial Valley, Cal., and began an elaborate system of irrigation, but to flood waters of the Colorado, was too much for them, it cut a new channel and for many months the valley forming poured down into the Colorado and threatened to turn the rich productive soil of the Imperial Valley into an immense inland sea. In this crisis the government was appealed to and the Southern Pacific railroad under instructions from President Roosevelt undertook the gigantic task, it was declared impossible by many eminent engineers, that of forcing the river into its natural channel.

The railroad with unlimited men and means at its command hauled hundreds of train loads of rock, sand and cement and built an immense breakwater that even the waters of the Colorado could not budger from inundation and thousands of small farmers from financial ruin.

The railroad towns in the valley, El Centro, Imperial, Imperial Junction, Salton, Mecca, Thermal, Coachella and Indio are all from 2 to 264 feet below sea level. The soil is wonderfully productive, and with unlimited water for irrigation under government supervision, great crops of cotton, alfalfa and many tropical plants and fruits are raised.

The Colorado has its source near Lander, Wyo., and follows almost directly south through Utah and Arizona, and empties into the Gulf of California, Lower California, Mexico, a few miles south of the international line at Yuma. Owing to the low altitude the summits are very hot in this section of California. On my first trip to California I read this item from a paper brought on the train. The editor of a paper published in a rival city claimed that Yuma was the hottest place in the U. S., and to clinch his argument stated that a citizen of Yuma died and went to Hades, and found the climate so cool there in comparison with the former town that he sent back to Yuma for his blankets.

Los Angeles, the metropolis of California, with a population of over 300,000, is a fast growing and beautiful city. I cannot dwell long upon the beauty and splendor of this "City of the Angels." Of its beautiful homes, fine hotels, great business blocks and cool and shady parks, and will only write of its splendid electric railroad system. At the Huntington building, corner of 6th and Main streets, a fine six story office building is located, the depot for the Huntington line of Suburban electric cars. This building covers an entire block, and a part of the lower floor is a spacious waiting room with all the adjuncts found in any first class waiting room.

Along one side of the waiting room runs a low partition in which are four sliding gates, and over each gate are the names of the various towns and cities to which the various trains and single cars are bound. A double track extends along the front. Returning cars pass along the outer track, unload their passengers, who pass out to the street without entering the waiting room. The car then passes on a short distance and is switched over to its proper gate, when the train is called, the gate opens and the passengers cross to the car, there is no track to cross and no danger of being run over, as no one except those that go on that car are supposed to pass through the gate.

One thing to go to Whittier, Long Beach, San Pedro, Mt. Wilson, Mt. Lowe, Monrovia, Pasadena, Tropic, Glendale and Burbank and some other points, have only to go to the waiting room and board their car. It is about twenty miles to Whittier and for the beach towns, and the fare for the round trip is usually fifty cents. There is also another car line and run cars to Gardell, Santa Monica, Ocean Park and Venice and I presume to other points. The city also has plenty of local car lines so that one can go to almost any part of the city, and can enjoy some very long rides on a five-cent fare.

My headquarters for the winter were at Tropic, seven miles out of the city, with my sister, Mrs. Burbank and her son Henry, who own a fine bungalow home at 307 Blanche Ave. About three blocks away is the fine home of Daniel Webster, a former Fryeburg-Conway boy who grew to manhood just over the New Hampshire line in Fag End St., Conway. Hampshire line in Fag End St., Conway. Mr. Webster has prospered. He owns a fine 160 acre alfalfa farm in the Imperial Valley and a fine home in Tropic.

Another West Fryeburg boy living in Pasadena is a son of Sam Carter. His father moved to Nebraska many years ago where he died, and the family came up. A letter received from Mr. Carter a few weeks ago reads in part as follows: "The 4th was a very nice day, clear as a bell. In the morning Mr. Webster came over, said his wife wanted Henry and myself to go over there and spend the day. We told him we would go. He said that his son who lives at Pasadena was coming down and would come for us. So about 10 we went. They had asked the Carter boy and child (Sam Carter's boy). At noon we had a very nice lunch. Then Mr. Webster's son took us, Henry and myself and Mr. Carter's family, in his auto up to Griffith's park."

"It was a fine ride. I had no idea it was a thing like what it is. The roads are fine and hard, fine for autos, and there were lots of them there, and lots of people too. It was the most enjoyable day I have had since I came to California."

Bessie Billings of Boston has been spending a week with Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Gordon.

Paul Carruthers is in Portland where he has accepted a position with Loring, Short & Harwood.

J. F. Phillips is visiting in Boston, Mass., Concord, Alexandria, and other places in New Hampshire.

Herbert Heath has purchased of C. E. Hill of Brownfield, a house lot at the lower end of Oxford street.

Ex-Speaker Joseph G. Cannon and John W. Dwight of New York were recent guests at the Argusnet.

The grain store of W. S. Leavitt has been moved from its location on the east side of Smith street to a point nearly opposite on the west side.

Horace Adams and Mrs. Maria Adams have been visiting Mrs. Adams' daughter, Mrs. Eben L. Baker, and family, at their summer home at West Dennis, Mass.

The Fryeburg Lumber Co. is building a new and commodious office and expect it to be ready for occupancy in a month. Business at the mill is excellent, 50 hands being employed.

Ernest Weeks of Cornish, headmaster of Fryeburg Academy, has been in Fryeburg and surrounding towns in the interest of the academy. He reports a favorable prospect for a large entering class.

John Eastman has returned from Chebeague Island, where he has been two weeks, spending the greater part of the time in deep sea fishing which speaks well for his stamina at the age of eighty-four years.

Mrs. Lizzie Chase and daughters, Dorothy and Eleanor of Laconia, are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. James Johnson. Mrs. Chase expects to move this fall to Portland where the family will make their home.

Chas. F. Richardson, connected with the Penn. R. R. office, native of this village, the son of Amos Richardson, who was for nearly seven years preceptor of Fryeburg Academy, has recently visited friends here, and has been in the town for the only remaining pupils of Prof. Richardson in this place.

Cut in Express Rates.

Reduction in express rates which will cost the companies approximately 16 per cent. of their gross revenue, were ordered by the interstate commerce commission to become effective on or before Oct. 15, 1913.

The most important change prescribed by the order is by way of modification of the present graduated scale of parcel rates. One hundred pound rates for short distances either have been left unchanged or slightly reduced; for longer distances they have been lowered; for fifty pounds or less all rates have been practically reduced.

By prescribing a so-called block system dividing the United States into 950 blocks averaging 2,500 square miles as originally proposed 900,000,000 different rates now published by the express companies will be reduced to less than 650,000, and the interstate commerce commission believes that the system points the way to a solution of the existing maze of freight rates.

The requirement of the order of June 8, 1912, that a label shall be attached to each parcel is modified to the extent that, in case of shipments of perishable property, consisting of two or more packages, the label need be attached only to one package.

The basis of the classification proposed by the commission is that all articles of merchandise of ordinary value are to be carried at first-class or ordinary merchandise rates. Articles of food and drink, with a few exceptions are second-class and are to be carried at 75 per cent. of the first-class rate.

The rates for newspapers and periodicals as well as for bread and such articles for which specially low rates now are charged, are substantially the same as at the present rate.

A permanent committee has been appointed to revise the routes of express carries to eliminate the circuitous routes which are now a cause of considerable complaint on the part of shippers.

The commission's order is for two years only. That period will give abundant opportunity for a test of these rates under varying conditions amounting to a normal average. In no other way can the absolutely proper rate basis for express be finally determined. Respondents be finally determined. Respondents be finally determined. Respondents be finally determined.

The decision of the commission, deferred as it has been for more than a year, followed an investigation that occupied nearly six years of hearings, special examinations of accounts and reports covering in detail the various phases of the express business.

CORSET NEWS

NEMO CORSETS

Nemo Corsets are taking the lead,
Once worn always worn

Every Nemo Corset has the patented and exclusive Nemo triple strip re-enforcement. The "pocket" of each bone and steel, at top and bottom is protected by three thicknesses of material. Bones and steels are prevented from cutting through at the top and bottom of the corset. That is one reason why Nemo Corsets out wear all other corsets.

The latest Nemo inventions Lastiklops Webbing and Lastikop Cloth have actually revolutionized corset making and placed Nemo Corsets still more clearly in a class alone secure from competitors.

Nemo Corsets $2.00, $3.00, $3.50.

THOMSON'S GLOVE-FITTING CORSETS

is a name that means something. It means something because every section and every gore of every corset that has been made has been carefully designed and as carefully put together TO FIT THE FIGURE LIKE A GLOVE.

This season's models excel all previous successes with the same workmanship that has stood pre-eminent for more than fifty years.

Thomson's Glove-Fitting Corsets, $1.00, $1.50, $2.

ROYAL WORCESTER CORSETS

Comparatively few articles of any nature have attained the international reputation and prestige of the Royal Worcester Corsets. There has been an ever increasing demand for them since they were first made in 1891. Perfect ease, comfort and freedom, whether sitting, standing, or walking, is characteristic of all wearers of Royal Worcester Corsets. The next time you need a corset try a Royal Worcester, in styles to fit your figure.

Royal Worcester Corsets $1.00, $1.50, $2.00.
